

Z-BOP background

Z-BOP is a unique record label, set up in 2003 by David Kempston aka Clatterbox (Clear, Neo-Ouija) and Steve Horne aka The Horn (Universal Language). Co-running the label with a family of artists who all hail from the South West of England.

Following the relocation or demise of the first wave of Great Western labels, Z-BOP's own brand of rural electronics will put the Westcountry firmly back on the map.

Z-BOP will provide a platform for similarly inclined beat farmers and visual artists, making connections with like minded communities around the world.

The label name will become synonymous with music of integrity that will stand the test of time. A mark of respect for those that have gone before, a means of expression and source of pleasure for all those involved - including you.

Z-BOP is truly a labour of love, with no hidden agendas and of humble beginnings. The end result - pioneering electronic grooves with an emphasis on sound innovation and functionality.

No attempts at filling any pigeonhole, the music will be left to speak for itself.

Artist profile : Even Steven

Whatever happened to The Horn? He's been on a sonic sabbatical for some time now but the artist responsible for a series of releases during the mid nineties on the label Universal Language is set to return to the fray as Even Steven.

Locked away in his lab for a period of years, Steve Horne has busied himself honing his skills far beyond initial reference points, taking in elements of Detroit and Chicago and infusing them with his own unique charm... giving them the horn.

New material retains the raw minimal grooves of his earlier work, fortified with a renewed vigour and impetus. Utilising new technology to further his sound Steve will continue to test the frontiers of the original electronic soul blueprint.

Don't get mad... Get Even.
